If there are really any organisations among the Chinese in this Colony for amuggling opium across CO. to the mainland, the local Government will feel justified in forwarding notice of any intention of the kind that comes within the cognisance of the officials. At the same time the Colony will expect that the taxation of provisions and non-dutiable goods, which has been carried on for a number of years, shall be promptly discontinued. Within only the last few hundred years the gibecome an extinct species; and it is therefore only reasonable to suppose that forms of life formerly existed in China which do so no longer, although traditions of them remain in perhaps a somewhat altered and exa gerated form.

I came across a very objectionable product of Chinese cheap labour the other day in the shape of one of those curiously hollowed out bad dollars which are, I think, peculiar to China; for it would not pay any European expert to make them. The other day I wrote something expressing disbelief in many statements concerning Chinese inventions, but, as I then observed, I do not wish to libel the race, and the assertion that this curious method of making bad dollars "had its oradlo" in China is certainly credible, and to Chinese therefore should be accorded the heacurof the invention. In order to make two of these bad dollars the manipulator must first procure three good ones; he then outs one in half horizontally, and having out away a good deal of metal from each disc so as to leave them both very thin indeed, he takes the other two dollars and hollows them out, one from the obverse the other from the reverse side. These hollowed out dollars he fills up with base metal, outs this smooth, and then solders on to each one of the discs procured by outting in half the dollar first treated, there being in this way the milling and both faces genuine and only the inside bad. The resulting product is two bad dollars and about one dollar and eighty cents worth of silver. For this ei hty cents or sometimes perhaps a little more the counterfeiter has to perform several days of todious labour and also run the risk of detection; there is likewise the cost of melting the lead or other base metal and soldering the disc of true metal on to the filled-in dollar. None but Chinese could find such a process remanerative. Are there any here who remember the Great Indian Mutiny, if so, they will recall the home coming of Outram. The country rose to greet him; the city of London, forsaking its ordinary business went mad to do him bonour. THE SANITARY CONDITION OF PEKING.

The Capital of China appears to be distinguished by two very salient and at first sight contradictory characteristics. It enjoys the reputation of being one of the filthiest cities in the world, and also one of the healthiest. We believe a recent correspondent was perfectly within the bounds of truth when he said that the rate of mortality in Peking compared favourably with that of any other city of its size; and there is no doubt that in spite of the apalling smalls which pervade the atmosphere, and the horrible accretions of secthing filth which lie rotting by the readside it is justly regarded as suited to the constitutions of foreigners. Pulmonary disease, it is true, are apt to attack persome of weak lungs, and ophthalmia is prewalent enough. These spring, we believe, from the exceeding dryness of the air and its imprognation with fine, sharp, particles of dust, which beat upon the face during a high wind like a shower of lillipation arrows. But it is to these two phenomena that Peking primarily owes its reputation for salubrity. The atmosphere is generally speaking intensely dry, liness in a humid place like Shanghai give place which line the atreets are offensive to dangerous to health as they do not give out those noxious and typhoid-breeding effluvia which are generated by closed draine. In fact, Peking affords an apt illustration of defective human arrangements being countersoted by natural phenomena. The lightness and perousness of the soil causes it to form a ready-made sieve. or filter, through which all liquid impurities percolate and disappear almost as soon as the accumulations take place. Even dust-storms are a beneficent arrangement of mature. It these exasperating visitations, which powder grit and turn a clean man into something very much like a chimney-eweep in a few minutes. have a distinctly purifying effect upon the atmosphere, and that without them Peking would be a very much less healthy place than it setually is. In fact they are said to purge the air precautions which nature is good enough to take Defendant denied the charges, but admitted on behalf of those who are so careless of themamong the people, which, while it expites the disgust of Europeans, nevertheless plays no lie health. This influence, according to the latest theory, lies in the fact that garlie, when received into the system, has the effect of destroying the bnoteria which are supposed to inhabit the human blood, and from the presence of which spring all disorders of a febrile nature. It may be said, therefore, that Nature revenges herself for the outrages of man by making use of the most disagreeable remedies to things. Now nitre, which is used as a manure. attend the examination owing to the state of the substance is indeed of inestimable value in the case of persons who, like the poorer class in tural death, and it is owing almost entirely to would cour every now and then if Nature did not exércise this salutary providence over those who are so little able to take care of themselves. There can be no doubt that were it not for these counteracting agencies the subject to periodical posts of extremely virulent type. In Shanghai we live under natural conitions far less favourable to health. The soil. so far from being dry and porous, is viscid and malarious. Instead of the disagraphle though beneficent dust-storms of the north, which choke effects of which are distinctly dangerous to health. The practice resorted to by the Chinese of distributing dead bodies over the face of the country, enclosed in rotten coffins, many of which are broken open, cannot but exercise a deleterious influence upon the neighbourhood, Municipal arrangements in Shanghai itself are no doubt excellent as far as they go, but of course they cannot extend to the surroundng fields, and it is there that one great source of the unhealthiness of Shaughai is to be found. The difference between Peking and Shan hai, hygionically speaking, lies in this -that in the former place Nature exerts herself to counternot the defective arrangements of man, while here we have to exert ourselves to counternot the hostile affuences of Nature.—N.
